

Walter Leans

Walter leans gaunt against the window.
His eyes wonder along the foothills and the far-flung city.

Walter turns intent.
It is his first book and each day,
"Five hundred words or three hours, whatever comes first."

Walter's eyelids dewlap around shimmering eyes,
Like a newborn.

So long ill,
Walter leans into words.